Our Boston Correspondence.

Washington, April 30, 1865.

On Tuesday last we had a general question of the nation. It was the most interesting and the most important question that has ever occurred in the history of the country. It was a question of the right to vote. This was a question of the right of all male citizens to vote in the election of officers. The question was decided in favor of the right to vote, and the people of the country are now free to exercise this right.

We have been informed that the President of the United States has issued a proclamation declaring that the war is over and that the nation is at peace. This is a very important event, and it is expected that it will lead to great changes in the government.

LOVE—WOMAN'S CHIEF ATTRACTION.

I want to go west. It is the old story of the westward movement. The west is the land of opportunity. It is the land of freedom. It is the land where a man can make a living. It is the land where a man can have a home. It is the land where a man can have a family. It is the land where a man can have a future. It is the land where a man can have a place in the world. It is the land where a man can have a chance to be happy.

NEW YORK AND THE SOUTH AFTER THE WAR.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Times writes that the people of the South are very much interested in the events of the war. They are looking forward to the time when the war will be over. They are looking forward to the time when the South will be free. They are looking forward to the time when they will have a government of their own. They are looking forward to the time when they will have a chance to be free.
