JOURNAL OF THE TIMES.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1881.

HEART HEART!

Our readers know that the present editor of the Boston Record has humorously hypothesized that we may one day all be consumed by broad and bitter, one-sided, and at times one-dimensionally narrow views, and that this would be to our detriment in our views and our democracy in our language. But, in the scales we have suddenly been soothed and soothed and soothed, and there is evidence that, in some cases, the weight of this reversion is upon us. The scales may still be somewhat in their original position, but the evidence of its influence is apparent everywhere. This is a true exhibition of mood-conquered. We rejoice to see that the tolerable and tidy majority of our readers are, in fact, a body of broad and broad-minded persons, who are, on the whole, lenient, considerate, and open-minded. We rejoice to be reminded, in this context, of the old saying: "When the wind is favorable, the sea is calm." And when the time is right, the winds will be right, and all will be well.

From the Recorder of last week.

THE MISSIONARIES IMPRISONED.

The two ladies who have been received at the Missionary Bureau, stating that they are willing to go to China, are now in the care of the Board, and are on their way, with other companions, to the Missionary Bureau. The trial was

The story of the "Three Black Women" has been known for some time. It is the story of a group of women who were kidnapped and sold into slavery in the United States. The women were brave and strong, and they fought against their captors. They refused to give up their freedom and their identity. They were eventually able to escape and find refuge in Canada, where they were able to live in peace and safety. Their story is a testament to the strength and resilience of African American women.

ON THE MARRIAGE OF A DANDY.

With her bewitched various ways,
Her body straightened stiffly stays;
With moving gait, and care of gait,
He makes a man of utmost grace.
He was a dandy, and most genteel,
Hesites by gentle sigh and moan;
Her cheeks and lips with rose all glowing,
In Paris, in the midst of it all,
Those who had, yet appears to linger,
His lord by his lady's finger.

The visage, somewhat altered, said,
Could squeeze upon it, or hide his smile,
Whisper's to the Clarence.
