Mr. Fairbanks — It is with pain that we are informed that the last will and testament of Mr. George D. Fairbanks, of the firm of William Rice & Co., has been received by your correspondent. The signers of the name are those of the late lamented merchant, a man of many kind offices and generous deeds, and one of the best men that ever served the town of Boston. In this sad circumstance, we are reminded of the advice given in the last will and testament of the late Mr. George Ticknor, which was, "To the last, and to die well, is the greatest glory a man can have."

We cannot refrain from expressing our regret at the untimely death of Mr. Fairbanks, and our sympathy with his widow and family in their grief. We trust that they may be comforted in their bereavement by the recollection of Mr. Fairbanks' many good deeds, and that they may be strengthened in their faith by the hope that he is in a better world. May his memory be a benediction to all who knew him.
THE LOST SHIP.

Deep in the silent waters,
An anchor lies forever,
Buried in the sands of time.

A gateway to the unknown,
In search of the unknown unknowns,
Embarking on an endless quest.

Pilota Chiron.

Amid the waves, a beacon,
Guiding the lost to safety,
A welcome sight at last.

And upon the high seas,
A journey of discovery,
The spirit of adventure lives on.

To the Reader:

The story of the lost ship
A testament to the human spirit,
Enduring through the ages.

REPLY TO A CORRESPONDENT.

In the year of the Lord in the United States of America,
Upon the banks of the Potomac,
The President of the United States addressed the following reply:

Dear Sir,

Your letter of the 1st instant has been received.

The subject of your communication is of great importance to the country.

Yours truly,

[Signature]

The President of the United States.

---

In the margin:

The President of the United States addressed the following reply:

Dear Sir,

Your letter of the 1st instant has been received.

The subject of your communication is of great importance to the country.

Yours truly,

[Signature]

The President of the United States.

---

The margin contains a note:

The President of the United States addressed the following reply:

Dear Sir,

Your letter of the 1st instant has been received.

The subject of your communication is of great importance to the country.

Yours truly,

[Signature]

The President of the United States.