KIDNAPPING BY LAW.

The following case at law, as reported in the 'American Anti-Slavery Register,' is of interest to those who are engaged in the work of combating the evil of kidnapping by law. It is a case in which a free Negro was kidnapped in the state of South Carolina and carried to Virginia, where he was held as a slave. The case was tried in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of South Carolina, and the defendant was convicted and sentenced to be whipped. The case was later appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States, and the decision of that court was reversed. The case is an example of the illegal and inhumane practice of kidnapping by law, which was common in the South during the antebellum period. It is a case that serves as a reminder of the brutality of slavery and the need for its abolition. A reading of this case will provide insight into the legal and moral complexities of the institution of slavery and the efforts to end it. The newspaper is a valuable resource for those interested in understanding the history of slavery and the struggle for freedom.
