THE LIBERATOR.

Vol. III.

WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON AND ISAAC KNAPP, PUBLISHERS.

OUR COUNTRY IS THE WORLD—OUR COUNTRYMEN, ALL MANKIND.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 10, 1838.

The Liberator.

In his essay on "The American agricultural interest," the late Dr. Channing, in 1825, said: "We have, in my opinion, a sufficient reason for applauding the "Ancient Dutchman," for abandoning the "laborious and toilsome agriculture," and for the liberal system of "political economy," which, until the close of the French wars, continued to prevail in the Northern States, and which has been the cause of the most considerable improvement in the arts and manufactures of the country."

But, in the present state of the economy of the United States, it is necessary to consider the subject of the "American agricultural interest," in a different light. The present system of agriculture in the United States, is, in my opinion, a sufficient reason for applauding the "laborious and toilsome agriculture," and for the liberal system of "political economy," which, until the close of the French wars, continued to prevail in the Northern States, and which has been the cause of the most considerable improvement in the arts and manufactures of the country.

The present system of agriculture in the United States, is, in my opinion, a sufficient reason for applauding the "laborious and toilsome agriculture," and for the liberal system of "political economy," which, until the close of the French wars, continued to prevail in the Northern States, and which has been the cause of the most considerable improvement in the arts and manufactures of the country.

The present system of agriculture in the United States, is, in my opinion, a sufficient reason for applauding the "laborious and toilsome agriculture," and for the liberal system of "political economy," which, until the close of the French wars, continued to prevail in the Northern States, and which has been the cause of the most considerable improvement in the arts and manufactures of the country.

The present system of agriculture in the United States, is, in my opinion, a sufficient reason for applauding the "laborious and toilsome agriculture," and for the liberal system of "political economy," which, until the close of the French wars, continued to prevail in the Northern States, and which has been the cause of the most considerable improvement in the arts and manufactures of the country.

The present system of agriculture in the United States, is, in my opinion, a sufficient reason for applauding the "laborious and toilsome agriculture," and for the liberal system of "political economy," which, until the close of the French wars, continued to prevail in the Northern States, and which has been the cause of the most considerable improvement in the arts and manufactures of the country.
LADIES DEPARTMENT.

ENSUING NEWS.

The following report of the proposed movement of the American Colonization Society, as it appeared in the Washington Evening Star, June 9th, is inserted for the information of the members and friends of the Society.

"The American Colonization Society is now in a condition to commence the work of colonization, and has made preparations for the purpose. The Society has, therefore, authorized a committee of three, consisting of Mr. William Lloyd Garrison, Mr. James G. Birney, and Mr. Freeman, to go to Africa with the purpose of selecting a site for a colony, and of making all necessary arrangements for the establishment of the colony."
LITERARY MISCELLANEOUS AND MORAL.

This author's writings call to the memory of past events, and we believe are much admired among the literary part of the community. His style is bold and vigorous, his language strong and expressive, and his ideas are novel and original. He has written many books, and is at present engaged in composing another, which will be published shortly. The author is well known, and has many admirers. We think this is a fine piece of writing, and hope it will be successful.