THE LIBERATOR.

VOL. III.
WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON AND ISAAC KNAPP, PUBLISHERS.

OUR COUNTRY IS THE WORLD—OUR COUNTRYMEN, ALL MANKIND.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 24, 1839.

The publication of the American Anti-Slavery Society in New York, has been an important event in the history of the abolition movement. It marks a departure from the old form of the American Anti-Slavery Society, which was a national organization with a central headquarters in Boston. The new society, on the other hand, is a sectional organization with a central headquarters in New York. This change reflects the increasing political and social divisions in the United States at the time, and the growing sense of sectionalism. The publication of the American Anti-Slavery Society in New York also marks a turning point in the abolition movement. The new society was able to attract a wider audience and to reach a larger number of people. It was able to mobilize a broader base of support and to gain more influence in the political process. The publication of the American Anti-Slavery Society in New York was a significant event that helped to shape the course of the abolition movement and to bring about the eventual abolition of slavery in the United States.

[For the Liberators]

UNCLE SIMON'S EAST CHINA.

Hank, do you know that by this time tomorrow I'll be on my way to the Orient? Dr. Wu is well aware of my plans.

DR. WU.

Yes, Doctor. I've been informed of your intentions.

HANK.

Then it's settled. I'll be in China by the end of the week.

DR. WU.

I'm sure you will find it an interesting experience.

HUANG.

I'm grateful for your hospitality, Doctor. Your kindness will not be forgotten.

DR. WU.

It's my duty to assist you in any way possible.

HANK.

I appreciate that. I'm looking forward to meeting some of the local politicians and learning about their policies.

HUANG.

I believe they have implemented some groundbreaking reforms.

DR. WU.

We have made progress, but there's still much work to be done.

HANK.

That's encouraging to hear. I'm excited to be a part of it.

HUANG.

And I'm confident you will make a valuable contribution.

DR. WU.

Well, I hope so. Now, let's focus on the tasks at hand.
