A LETTER TO MRS. C.:
A Letter to my Lord: Oh, so are we to be allowed to marry, and have children, and surround them with all the tender cares and blessings of childhood? Are we, then, to be allowed to have the means of bringing up and educating them, and giving them all the advantages of a good education? We shall have to be content with the presents of our friends, and the aid of the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge, and the like.

A LETTER TO MRS. C.
A Letter to my Lord: Oh, so are we to be allowed to marry, and have children, and surround them with all the tender cares and blessings of childhood? Are we, then, to be allowed to have the means of bringing up and educating them, and giving them all the advantages of a good education? We shall have to be content with the presents of our friends, and the aid of the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge, and the like.

MODERNICAL JOURNAL.

This paper is published in the city of New York, and is intended to be a periodical, especially for the amusement and information of the inhabitants of the United States. It will be a journal of literature, art, and science, with an occasional insertion of political and social events.

April 18, 1838.

[Text continues on page 46, with various articles and notices.]