The following pages contain the full text of the Constitution of the Anti-Slavery Society, as published in the Liberator on September 26, 1854. The text is a detailed outline of the organization's structure, principles, and objectives, reflecting the abolitionist movement's commitment to ending slavery and fighting for racial equality. The document was signed by a number of prominent abolitionists, including William Lloyd Garrison, Harriet Beecher Stowe, and Frederick Douglass, among others. It outlines the society's goals, membership, and operational procedures, providing a historical snapshot of the struggle against slavery in the 19th century.
