SLAVERY AND COLONIZATION.

The friends of the abolition of slavery are often accused of being too much interested in the immediate解放 of the Negro, and that they do not sufficiently consider the moral and spiritual welfare of the African race. This accusation is often made by those who are opposed to the abolition of slavery, and who are content with the existing system. It is true that the immediate解放 of the Negro is an important consideration, and that the moral and spiritual welfare of the African race is also important. But the two considerations are not mutually exclusive. The immediate解放 of the Negro is a necessary step towards the moral and spiritual welfare of the African race. The abolition of slavery is a necessary step towards the liberation of the African race from the bonds of oppression.

A CHAPrer ON TEMPer.

One of the most interesting faces in the human character is that which represents the effects produced by temper and disposition. The grace and ease of manner, the mellow sweetness of voice, the pleasantness of appearance, and the general air of good-humor and amiability, are qualities which are sure to command the admiration and applause of all who are in company with them. But it is not only the outward and visible qualities of character which are so important, but also the inward and secret qualities, which are those that are most difficult to be seen and understood. It is not only the man who is pleasant to be with, but also the man who is good to be with, that is the person whom we should value most. It is the man who can make others happy, who is the true friend, and who is the true benefactor of mankind.

These are the qualities which are the true signs of excellence, and which are the true marks of a good man. It is not only the man who is able to do good, but also the man who is able to prevent evil, that is the person whom we should esteem most. It is the man who can save others from harm, who is the true protector, and who is the true benefactor of mankind. It is the man who can make others happy, who is the true friend, and who is the true benefactor of mankind.
