COMMUNICATIONS.

CONSTITUTION OF THE BUREAU OF INDIAN AFFAIRS.

The Constitution shall be ratified by the United States Senate, by a majority of two-thirds of all its Members, present and voting. If said Constitution shall not be so ratified within the space of two years from the date of its submission to the Senate, it shall be deemed abandoned and never to be considered as a part of the Constitution of the United States.

The Constitution shall contain provisions for the establishment of an Indian Bureau, to be known as the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and for the appointment of a Secretary of the Interior, and such other officers as may be necessary for the execution of the provisions of said Constitution.

The Secretary of the Interior shall be the head of the said Bureau of Indian Affairs, and shall have charge and supervision of all matters connected with the execution of the provisions of said Constitution.

The Constitution shall be submitted to the States for the ratification of the people thereof, and shall be amended, if necessary, by a majority of the several States, in such manner as may be prescribed by law, and shall be submitted to the several States for the ratification of the people thereof, and shall be amended, if necessary, by a majority of the several States, in such manner as may be prescribed by law.

The Constitution shall be submitted to the people of the United States for the ratification of the people thereof, and shall be amended, if necessary, by a majority of the several States, in such manner as may be prescribed by law.