III.

OPPOSITION TO THE ACTION OF WOMAN.
Some(11) frowned, because upon our deck
Woman was seen, with form erect,
Trimming the canvass to the breeze,
To make the vessel sail with case. To make the vessel sail win case.

They said it was not so of yere ;—

That woman's work's within the door

Of her donestic domical;—

To do her lord and master's will. (12)

Or she may sometimes circulate
Trects,(13) such as D.D.'s approbate;
But should not otherwise appear
In public,—for 'tis not her sphere.

In public,—for its not set space.

Perceiving no such doctrine taught
By Hiss who man's salvation brought,
This dogma we behind us cast,
And onward sped before the blast.

And onward sped before the blast.

IV.

RURDER OF LOVELOT.

E'er long, a cloud, surcharged with wrath
Of men, (14) o'erhung our vessel's path j—
It threaten'd deash to all our craw,
Unless we from our posts withdrew.

A lion-hearted sailor rose
And said, 'I fear not all our foes;—(15)
If God be with me, I'll abide
The coming storm, whate'er betide.'

With that, the men who charged the clot Did surse the sallor long and loud, Who dared their forces thus defy,— And swore that he, ere long, should die.

They railled on a certain night, (Such deed(16) as their's ne'er sought the light,) Took deadly aim at where he stood,— Lovejoy fell welleng in his blood.

Throughout our ship the tidings flew, That one had fallen of our crew By surferess hands ,—we bowed in prayer ,— God heard—and saved us from despair.
