THE WAR OF SLAVERY

THE WAR OF SLAVERY.
That slavery is a state of war
And sin, we cannot doubt;
The objects most contended for
Cannot be had without.
The practice dors the same effects
And evits introduce;
And losses, too, in all respects,
And verry vile abuse.

And every vite house.

The blood and carnage, groons and tear
And wounds and scarr and pain,
lajustice, wong, deepair and fears,
The same appearance gain;
And poverty, with all its woes,
And visage lank and wan;
And wisage lank and wan;
Who urge the haveo on.

And wicked gains to more but shoes Who arge the Anvec on.

If men but now of war the seeds,
They must its soils endure;
That war the same expenses needs,
In every form, is nere.

For though we call it by the name
Of peace, if a long is need to the same
Of peace, if a long is need to the same
With equal certainty.
The fainest wait like the name,
With equal certainty.
The fainest wait like the name
With milk and biony flow,
Are power than the powers from
With milk and biony flow,
Are power than the postess free,
Because by slavery carried;
Delvi ignorance and powerty
Degrade shem to the data.

Degrads them to the dast.
Where brightest flowers and hickest at
In rich profession spread,
There man his fellow man degrades,
And robe him of his bread.
And while the tyrant hoards himself
His wealth at others' cost,
As easy spent, the stoken pelf
Is to the country lost.
