THE LIBERATOR

BOSTON:

FRIDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 19, 1841

George Goodwin

To the Editors of your paper,牆，

Near Portland, Me.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

George Goodwin.

THE LIBERATOR.

December, 1841.

From the New York Observer.

In the evening of the 19th of October, a Sober and Public Meeting was held in the Court House, New York, for the purpose of discussing the following questions: 1. The adoption of the Anti-Slavery Constitution of the U.S. 2. The adoption of the Anti-Slavery Constitution of the State of New York. 3. The adoption of the Anti-Slavery Constitution of the City of New York.

The Meeting was attended by a large number of persons, who were all enthusiastic in their support of the Anti-Slavery Constitution. The Meeting adjourned without coming to any definite conclusion.

From the New York Observer.

Quincy, Nov. 21st, 1841.

The present state of feeling in the East is such that it is difficult to imagine how long any public meeting can be sustained. The subject of the Anti-Slavery Constitution is so thoroughly canvassed that it is unlikely that any new points can be brought forward. The present state of feeling in the East is such that it is difficult to imagine how long any public meeting can be sustained.

From the New York Observer.

Quincy, Nov. 21st, 1841.

The present state of feeling in the East is such that it is difficult to imagine how long any public meeting can be sustained. The subject of the Anti-Slavery Constitution is so thoroughly canvassed that it is unlikely that any new points can be brought forward. The present state of feeling in the East is such that it is difficult to imagine how long any public meeting can be sustained.

From the New York Observer.

Quincy, Nov. 21st, 1841.

The present state of feeling in the East is such that it is difficult to imagine how long any public meeting can be sustained. The subject of the Anti-Slavery Constitution is so thoroughly canvassed that it is unlikely that any new points can be brought forward. The present state of feeling in the East is such that it is difficult to imagine how long any public meeting can be sustained.

From the New York Observer.

Quincy, Nov. 21st, 1841.

The present state of feeling in the East is such that it is difficult to imagine how long any public meeting can be sustained. The subject of the Anti-Slavery Constitution is so thoroughly canvassed that it is unlikely that any new points can be brought forward. The present state of feeling in the East is such that it is difficult to imagine how long any public meeting can be sustained.
The Liberator