AUGUSTA, Me., May 6, 1843.

The subject of the title of the present letter is the late popular movement in favor of a national church. The question is whether the government shall be co-ordinated with the church, or whether the church shall remain independent. The former view is held by the Whigs, while the latter view is held by the Democrats. The Whigs believe that the government should be co-ordinated with the church, while the Democrats believe that the church should remain independent.

The following article, which appeared in the Boston Daily Advertiser, was printed in the Boston Atlas, and is reprinted here, from the original, for the purpose of informing our readers of the state of the political affairs of the country.

The Massachusetts Convention of Delegates was held in the city of Boston, on the 5th of May, 1843. The convention was composed of members from all parts of the state, and was called to order by the Speaker. The convention was in session for several weeks, during which time it passed a number of important resolutions, which are here printed in full.

The convention, after passing the resolutions, adjourned to meet again on the 10th of May, when it was expected to pass a number of other important resolutions. The meeting was attended by a large number of the citizens of the state, who were present to hear the proceedings.
