For the Liberato

But foundered on the strand.
The land of liberty she left,
Bound for the land of slaves;
And there she lies in Dundrum Bay,
The sport of British wares.
She carried those who preach the word
Of God to bond and free,
But dare not both the freeman set
His slaves at liberty.

His alves at liberty.

But carried men who eame to prove

That Christian men may hold

Their fellow-men in iron bonds,
And barter them for gold.

She carried those who dare not speal

Of freedom to the slave.

Nor teach him to persue the word

Of Him who came to save.

She carried men whose glozing ton Have poisoned British ears, With doctrines cursed as the soil Which steams with negro's tears

Which steams with negres wetter.

Bit smiled—bottearce had left the port,
Orreached the open main,
Bits could not hold so strange a freight,
But cast it forth again.
And there are lies in Daudrum Bay,
Bo late the Ocean's price,
Immovable by human skill,
By steam, or sail, or tide.

Unlike that merchant ship of old, Which sailed upon her way, As soon as Jonah had become The monster's living prey.

Oh! grievous was the prophet's sin, Which caused the Ocean's wrath, Which could not be appeased or stilled. Till Jonah was cast forth.

White tooks are forth.

But deeper far is his offence,
A crime of blacker dye,
Who calls himself a Christian man,
Yet pleads for shever!

Great British: may the float once more,
And with across the main,
The men the cast upon our shore,
Now hoing them hack again!
