MORAL RIPORMERS.

In Europe and America, this class of philosophers are almost universally obsocious to the charge of indelity, it was the same in Greece, Rame and ferrusalem. Those who preferred these charges, in the places here named, were not Christians, and we do not-think the worse of those who subjected themselves to this charge; although the rafers, and the fashionable and, influential chases in those times certainly did consider, or affect to consider them as
