

HUZZA FOR OLD TAYLOR.

For old Taylor the Whig may cry,
With a smile on the lip—and a tear in the eye—
But I vote for the slaveholder—never! not!

In vain they call him the best of the clan;

And the bravest of heroes, who never turn—

—The slaveholder's best is a traitor to man!

The Whig may deserve the post of the free,

To the demons of Slavery have bent the proud knee,

And have shown us how grovling the holly may be,

The cowards who dare not freedom unite,

But driven from her colors, and ran from the fight,

May get shot at the back—and shelling the right.

I honor the man who fights till victory reigns,

Whom no flattery, no bribe, can buy, or banish,

And such only, my country, is Liberty's friend.

The man who will battle for freedom's cause,

Who would not make himself another's slave,

Such only is worth the name of the brave.

A true and valiant patriot is a schoolboy,

And may make of their school a home or a goal,

But they'll never make this child a slaveholder's tool.

Huzzas for a party, comprising the race!

Who fear Liberty's banner will never disgrace;

Who succumb not to slavery, and shun a doughtier,

Let conscience direct, and all parties will yield

Their free opinions sufficient to enter the field;

And, undivided, the downfall of slavery is sealed.

THE DEBTOR.

In prison debt—with no expere-

ience, and his creditors are pressing by,

Till the eternal shadows fall.

In prison for debt;—till the long, long night,

He lies on his bed of straw;

And wonders why Might is always Right;

At least in the eye of the law.

And he wakes at the morning's earliest dawn,

And peers through the twilight gray,

To catch the first glimpse of her who will come,

With the morn's first gimmering ray.

With her sickly boy he will come at morn,

And the wretched man will weep;

For shinier is growing his child's slight form,

And paler his wife's pale cheek.

The strong, proud man is wasting away

in his prison at the hands of the law,

And the poor debtor's spirit dies,

And her child is dying.

Days pass, and the father's heart grows weak,

And he watches in vain, in vain!

He comes with tears on his sad, pale cheek;

—I've not his child again!

And his wife grows thinner, her step more slow,

Her eye is unsteady bright,

Alas, this is but for prisoner's woe,

She is dying before his sight!

She is dying of want, of grief and despair,

She is passing slowly way!

Breathing out her life in that prison air,

With no hope but to die by her.

No hope on earth—is there only one,

Who can help him out of the door,

His last thoughts were his—her last words were prayer.

O! deal with him gently now—

His heart is all full of grief and despair,

There's revenge on his darkening brow.

'Tis hard to bear—to strive for bread

As the dying wife strives for life;

The hard and bitter strife,

To harder to breathe in a prison air,

She is dying before her eyes,

And your loved ones dying of want and despair,

With no mortal hand to save!

From the Non-Slaveholder.

THE QUAKER OF THE OLDER TIME.

The Quaker of the older time!—

How calm and firm and true,

Unspotted by his wrong and crime,

He was a man of simple thought,

The last of power, the last of grace,

The thousand force of sin.

Around him, had no power to stain

The purity within.

With that deep insight which detects

All great sin, all small,

And sees how each sin a life affects

The spiritual life of all,

He walked by faith, and not by sight,

By love, and not by awe;

The presence of the wrong or right,

We failed that was seen.

He felt that wrong with wrong partitioned,

Thinking that the wrong was right,

That when he was in trouble, maker

His brother's son his own,

And, passing not for doubtful choice

Of right or wrong, or small,

He listened to that "wise voice,"

Which called away from all.

Oh! Spirit of that early day,

When you were in the earth, true,

With us in the arrowy way!

Our faithful fathers knew,

Give strength to the evil to smite,

The curse of Truth to bear,

And love and reverent fear, to make

Our daily lives a prayer!

THE CHOICE OF A WIFE.

Enough of beauty to see a sufficient,

Enough of uprightness to secure a portion,

Of modest deport to claim protection,

A docile mind subversive to correction,

Yet soared with sense, with reason and affection,

And every passion held in subjection,

Just as it is, to keep her from election,

When such a fit companion for a mate.

ON THE CHOICE OF A HUSBAND.

Of beauty just enough to keep inspection,

Of candor, sense and wit a good collection,

Enough of love for one who needs protection,

To scorn the world;—I'll make him an abomination;

Wise, and a weak'er's imprudence,

Or else I'll meet with such in my company,

Let him propose—I'll offer no objection.

REFORMATORY.

THE BRITISH REFORMATIVE SIGHTS.

Among the historical and characteristic sights, which are to be seen in England, that of the disease of the eye is not the least conspicuous, nor are its results likely to prove of doubtful benefit to mankind. But, like all the other sights, that have been observed, it is not the ordinary treatment of the eye, but the extraordinary treatment of the new discovery under this head, that is presented for the consideration of the public.

Mr. John Smith, a worthy member of the Society for the Treatment of the Eye, has described the new discovery under this head, in a paper read before the Royal Society of Medicine, on the 21st ult.
