THE TAYLOR RACE.

What we say may serve to remind those who regard the contest with the negroes with indifference, that the subjects of this great question are the negroes. There is no question in which the negroes are less regarded than in this, and the negroes are the most important of all. The negroes are the very life of the contest, and the negroes are the very soul of the contest. The negroes are the very heart of the contest, and the negroes are the very spirit of the contest. The negroes are the very nerve of the contest, and the negroes are the very life of the contest. The negroes are the very soul of the contest, and the negroes are the very spirit of the contest. The negroes are the very nerve of the contest, and the negroes are the very life of the contest.
