Anti-Slavery Celebration at Arlington.

As usual, the first day in the month, the Anti-Slavery men and women gathered at the Arlington Street Church, for the annual celebration of the Anniversary of the Emancipation of the Africans in the Western World. The meeting was called to order by Mr. Wendell Phillips. Mr. Garrison then addressed the audience, and read the resolutions of the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society. After a short interval, the meeting adjourned.

A New Work.

There were two large and handsome buildings, one on each side of the street, which contained the offices of the Liberator. On the right was the Post-Office, and on the left was the Bank of Boston. The doors were open, and a large crowd of people were seen entering and leaving. The building was well lighted, and the furniture was arranged in a neat and orderly manner. The room contained a large desk, on which were neatly arranged a number of papers, and a large table, on which were neatly arranged a number of books. The people were busy, and the atmosphere was filled with the sound of voices and the grating of the typewriters.
