The Liberator

Anti-Slavery Convention in New York.

On Thursday, the 15th inst., I presented four hundred dollars at the Convention Hall in New York, in payment of the expenses of the Anti-Slavery Convention, which met here the 1st of this month. The Convention numbered twenty-five hundred members, without Grocers. The proceedings of the Convention were, in my opinion, all most exemplary, and I hope they will be hailed as a great step forward in the cause of humanity. The Convention adopted a resolution, in the spirit of which I am sure all our hearts are filled, expressing our gratitude to the Convention for the manner in which they have conducted their business, and for the zeal and energy with which they have pursued their objects. The Convention also adopted a resolution, in the spirit of which I am sure all our hearts are filled, expressing our gratitude to the Convention for the manner in which they have conducted their business, and for the zeal and energy with which they have pursued their objects. The resolution of the Convention was as follows:

"The Convention of the Anti-Slavery Society, in New York, having assembled at the Convention Hall, on the 1st of this month, and having proceeded to the business of the day, have met with the highest satisfaction, and have been actuated by the most ardent and unremitted exertions of zeal and energy.

"We believe that the Convention has conducted its business with the highest honor, and that the resolutions adopted by it are consistent with the spirit of the Constitution and the laws of the United States. We believe that the Convention has conducted its business with the highest honor, and that the resolutions adopted by it are consistent with the spirit of the Constitution and the laws of the United States.

"We are convinced that the Convention has conducted its business with the highest honor, and that the resolutions adopted by it are consistent with the spirit of the Constitution and the laws of the United States. We are convinced that the Convention has conducted its business with the highest honor, and that the resolutions adopted by it are consistent with the spirit of the Constitution and the laws of the United States.

"We are convinced that the Convention has conducted its business with the highest honor, and that the resolutions adopted by it are consistent with the spirit of the Constitution and the laws of the United States. We are convinced that the Convention has conducted its business with the highest honor, and that the resolutions adopted by it are consistent with the spirit of the Constitution and the laws of the United States."
