SUFFRAGE OF OPPRESSION.

AMERICAN SLAVERY.

In the present time, when by a movement of public sentiment, the sentiment is constantly being brought to bear upon the mass of the people, and the people of the world, to support a great and noble object, it is well to consider, with a few words, the importance of a great and noble object.
POETRY.

RAIN OF THE BOW.

When all the earth grows green,
And spring in every place,
And joy in every flower,
And hope in every face.

And then sees the bow, as wide
As any summer sky,
And bright and lovely as the day
That heaves the sun on high.

And then heavens shed their tears,
And earth and ocean shed,
And waters drop like showers apparent
From heaven’s great empyreal bed.

And then the bow all round
Is spread with margined wreath,
And sparkling dew drops hang in clusters
Around the rainbow’s length.

And then the bow, although
A melancholy sight,
Beareth a message of joy and gladness,
And comfort to the earth.

And then the bow, which stands
A sad, a sorrowful sign,
Beareth a message of gladness, and is seen
As a token of divine benign.

And then the bow, which comes
In all the brilliancy of light,
Beareth a message of joy and gladness
To every earth, and every sea.

And then the bow, which sees
A rainbow in the sight,
Beareth a message of joy and gladness
To every heart, and every soul.

And then the bow, which speaks
A rainbow in the sight,
Beareth a message of joy and gladness
To every earth, and every sea.

And then the bow, which comes
In all the brilliancy of light,
Beareth a message of joy and gladness
To every heart, and every soul.

And then the bow, which sees
A rainbow in the sight,
Beareth a message of joy and gladness
To every earth, and every sea.

And then the bow, which speaks
A rainbow in the sight,
Beareth a message of joy and gladness
To every heart, and every soul.

And then the bow, which comes
In all the brilliancy of light,
Beareth a message of joy and gladness
To every earth, and every sea.

And then the bow, which sees
A rainbow in the sight,
Beareth a message of joy and gladness
To every heart, and every soul.

And then the bow, which speaks
A rainbow in the sight,
Beareth a message of joy and gladness
To every earth, and every sea.

And then the bow, which comes
In all the brilliancy of light,
Beareth a message of joy and gladness
To every heart, and every soul.

And then the bow, which sees
A rainbow in the sight,
Beareth a message of joy and gladness
To every earth, and every sea.

And then the bow, which speaks
A rainbow in the sight,
Beareth a message of joy and gladness
To every heart, and every soul.
