ADDRESS IN THE RESPECTED NATIONAL CONVENTION OF THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES.

IN THE EXECUTION of the Constitution of the United States, a sentiment of equal rights for the colored race has been entertained, and the people of the South have been disposed to regard the Negro as a relative in the family of man. In the opinion of the people of the North, however, the Negro is not a relative in the family of man, but a slave. The North, therefore, holds him as a slave, for the purpose of securing his service to the people of the South. The South, therefore, holds him as a slave, for the purpose of securing his service to the people of the North.

This is the only difference between the North and the South. The North holds him as a slave, for the purpose of securing his service to the people of the South. The South, therefore, holds him as a slave, for the purpose of securing his service to the people of the North.

A DIFFERENT CONCEPTION of the Constitution of the United States.

The Constitution of the United States is a compact between the states, which are sovereign and independent powers, and the people of the United States, who are the only sovereign power in the United States. The Constitution, therefore, is a compact between the states and the people of the United States.

The Constitution, therefore, is a compact between the states and the people of the United States, and it is the duty of the people of the United States to execute the Constitution, and to secure the rights of the people of the United States.

A DIFFERENT CONCEPTION of the Constitution of the United States.

The Constitution of the United States is a compact between the states and the people of the United States, and it is the duty of the people of the United States to execute the Constitution, and to secure the rights of the people of the United States.

The Constitution, therefore, is a compact between the states and the people of the United States, and it is the duty of the people of the United States to execute the Constitution, and to secure the rights of the people of the United States.

A DIFFERENT CONCEPTION of the Constitution of the United States.

The Constitution of the United States is a compact between the states and the people of the United States, and it is the duty of the people of the United States to execute the Constitution, and to secure the rights of the people of the United States.

The Constitution, therefore, is a compact between the states and the people of the United States, and it is the duty of the people of the United States to execute the Constitution, and to secure the rights of the people of the United States.

A DIFFERENT CONCEPTION of the Constitution of the United States.

The Constitution of the United States is a compact between the states and the people of the United States, and it is the duty of the people of the United States to execute the Constitution, and to secure the rights of the people of the United States.

The Constitution, therefore, is a compact between the states and the people of the United States, and it is the duty of the people of the United States to execute the Constitution, and to secure the rights of the people of the United States.

A DIFFERENT CONCEPTION of the Constitution of the United States.

The Constitution of the United States is a compact between the states and the people of the United States, and it is the duty of the people of the United States to execute the Constitution, and to secure the rights of the people of the United States.

The Constitution, therefore, is a compact between the states and the people of the United States, and it is the duty of the people of the United States to execute the Constitution, and to secure the rights of the people of the United States.

A DIFFERENT CONCEPTION of the Constitution of the United States.

The Constitution of the United States is a compact between the states and the people of the United States, and it is the duty of the people of the United States to execute the Constitution, and to secure the rights of the people of the United States.

The Constitution, therefore, is a compact between the states and the people of the United States, and it is the duty of the people of the United States to execute the Constitution, and to secure the rights of the people of the United States.

A DIFFERENT CONCEPTION of the Constitution of the United States.

The Constitution of the United States is a compact between the states and the people of the United States, and it is the duty of the people of the United States to execute the Constitution, and to secure the rights of the people of the United States.