REFUSE OF OPPRESSION.

THE TRAVELS OF OPPRESSION.

From the London Gagiste.

The first appearance of a cosmopolitan travel public has been held at the Christian Church of New York, which is to open a series of lectures designed to unfold the various phases of social and political phenomena. The public was present in large numbers and was well satisfied with the performance of the occasion. The lectures will be delivered by a series of foreign lecturers, who have been engaged for the purpose of imparting some knowledge of the political and social conditions of other countries. The first lecture was delivered by a lecturer from France, who gave an account of the political and social conditions of that country. The lecturer was well received by the audience, who were much interested in his account of the political and social conditions of France. The second lecture was delivered by a lecturer from Germany, who gave an account of the political and social conditions of that country. The lecturer was well received by the audience, who were much interested in his account of the political and social conditions of Germany. The third lecture was delivered by a lecturer from Russia, who gave an account of the political and social conditions of that country. The lecturer was well received by the audience, who were much interested in his account of the political and social conditions of Russia. The fourth lecture was delivered by a lecturer from Italy, who gave an account of the political and social conditions of that country. The lecturer was well received by the audience, who were much interested in his account of the political and social conditions of Italy. The fifth lecture was delivered by a lecturer from Spain, who gave an account of the political and social conditions of that country. The lecturer was well received by the audience, who were much interested in his account of the political and social conditions of Spain. The sixth lecture was delivered by a lecturer from Portugal, who gave an account of the political and social conditions of that country. The lecturer was well received by the audience, who were much interested in his account of the political and social conditions of Portugal. The seventh lecture was delivered by a lecturer from Sweden, who gave an account of the political and social conditions of that country. The lecturer was well received by the audience, who were much interested in his account of the political and social conditions of Sweden. The eighth lecture was delivered by a lecturer from Norway, who gave an account of the political and social conditions of that country. The lecturer was well received by the audience, who were much interested in his account of the political and social conditions of Norway. The ninth lecture was delivered by a lecturer from Denmark, who gave an account of the political and social conditions of that country. The lecturer was well received by the audience, who were much interested in his account of the political and social conditions of Denmark. The tenth lecture was delivered by a lecturer from Holland, who gave an account of the political and social conditions of that country. The lecturer was well received by the audience, who were much interested in his account of the political and social conditions of Holland.