THE LIBERATOR.

SEPTEMBER 1.

THE MANCHESTER CONFERENCE.

The Manchester Conference was an emergency meeting held to discuss the ongoing crisis in Ireland. The conference was convened to address the growing public concern over the Irish Potato Famine, which had resulted in widespread famine, disease, and emigration. The attendees included representatives from various political parties and social reformers. The conference aimed to find solutions to alleviate the suffering of the Irish people and to promote a peaceful resolution to the conflict. The proceedings of the conference were discussed in detail in the next edition of The Liberator.