CASE OF MISS HURRAH A. WEBSTER.

From the New York Observer.

The President of the American Anti-Slavery Society, in a letter to the Editor of the New York Observer, states that he has received intelligence from a Society in New England, that an African lady, named Miss Hurray A. Webster, is about to be sent to Africa, and that she is a colored lady of considerable property, who, for some years past, has been engaged in the commercial business of the city of New York. She is said to be a person of good moral character and from the reports of her friends, she is said to be a very intelligent and accomplished lady. The American Anti-Slavery Society, in consequence of the information received, has determined to send her to Africa, and to assist her in her attempts to establish a school for the education of the children of the African race. The Society has already subscribed $5,000, and it is expected that the sum will be increased to $10,000. The Society has also determined to send a competent agent to Africa to superintend the establishment of the school, and to make arrangements for the support of the scholars.
