REFUGEE OF OPPRESSION.

THE PROTEST OF ROBERT C. HARRISON.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19, 1857. I have learned, with trembling heart, that my name is numbered among the list of conspirators, for attempting to rescue the fugitive slave, John Beardsley. I have no other feeling than that of sorrow and regret. I have been, and am, unalterably opposed to the Fugitive Slave Law...
A TASTER IN MISSOURI.

The government, having made the necessary arrangements, has assigned an agent to receive the first lot of Missouri Negroes, and to proceed with them to the border of the United States.  The Negroes arrived at St. Louis on the 12th of July, were conducted to the Union Station and placed on board the steamer "Missouri."  They were then carried to the mouth of the Mississippi, where they were embarked on board a small steamboat, and proceeded to Cairo.  The steamer was attended by a large number of the citizens of the city, who were highly gratified with the success of the enterprise.  They expressed their joy and satisfaction at the prospect of the Negroes being conveyed to their homes in the free states.  The vessel reached Cairo on the 15th of July, and the Negroes were received by a large concourse of people, who eagerly awaited their arrival.  They were conducted to the homes of their friends, where they were received with the greatest cordiality.  The Negroes were happy and contented, and their arrival was hailed with delight by the whole community.
