HARRISBURG, Aug. 27, 1852.

The Pennsylvania legislature has been in session for the past four weeks, and has already passed several important measures. Among the most notable is the abolition of slavery in the state. The bill was introduced by Senator John R. Thompson and was passed by both houses with a large majority. Governor James Buchanan signed the bill into law on August 27, 1852.

In other news, the issue of the abolition of slavery has sparked a heated debate across the country. In New York, the Anti-Slavery Society has held several meetings to discuss the issue. In Philadelphia, the Pennsylvania Anti-Slavery Society has organized a march to protest against the institution of slavery.

In other news, the new president of the United States, James Buchanan, has been inaugurated. He has promised to continue the policies of his predecessor, Abraham Lincoln, and to work towards the abolition of slavery.

The following is a summary of the news from the past week:

1. The Pennsylvania legislature has passed the abolition of slavery bill.
2. The Anti-Slavery Society has held meetings in New York and Philadelphia.
3. President James Buchanan has been inaugurated.

The Pennsylvania State Gazette

HARRISBURG, Aug. 27, 1852.

The Pennsylvania legislature has been in session for the past four weeks, and has already passed several important measures. Among the most notable is the abolition of slavery in the state. The bill was introduced by Senator John R. Thompson and was passed by both houses with a large majority. Governor James Buchanan signed the bill into law on August 27, 1852.

In other news, the issue of the abolition of slavery has sparked a heated debate across the country. In New York, the Anti-Slavery Society has held several meetings to discuss the issue. In Philadelphia, the Pennsylvania Anti-Slavery Society has organized a march to protest against the institution of slavery.

In other news, the new president of the United States, James Buchanan, has been inaugurated. He has promised to continue the policies of his predecessor, Abraham Lincoln, and to work towards the abolition of slavery.

The following is a summary of the news from the past week:

1. The Pennsylvania legislature has passed the abolition of slavery bill.
2. The Anti-Slavery Society has held meetings in New York and Philadelphia.
3. President James Buchanan has been inaugurated.

The Pennsylvania State Gazette
AUGUST 27.
THE LIBRATOR.

Between 1839 and 1840 was published a little book entitled "A Memoir of the Life of James Otis, a Friend of Liberty," by a New England patriot, and a copy of which is now in my possession. The book was written by a man named William B. Cushing, who was a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, and who was also a friend of James Otis, a fellow patriot. The book is a brief and able account of the life of James Otis, and it is well worth reading for its historical and biographical value.

The book contains a number of interesting anecdotes and incidents, and it is a valuable addition to our knowledge of the life of a man who was a great and patriotic leader. The book is a good example of the kind of writing that was done in the early days of the American Revolution, and it is a reminder of the importance of preserving the memory of our ancestors.

The book is a small and inexpensive volume, and it is a fitting tribute to the memory of a man who was a great and patriotic leader. It is a book that should be read by all who are interested in the history of the United States, and it is a book that should be preserved for future generations.

I have read the book, and I have found it to be a valuable addition to my knowledge of the history of the United States. I recommend it to all who are interested in the history of the United States, and I recommend it to all who are interested in the life of James Otis.