THE LIBERATOR.

THE CHARGE OF CHELSEA GYMNASIUM.

To the Student of the Chelsa Gymnasium:

We have just received an account of the recent commencement of the Chelsa Gymnasium, and are sorry to learn that, in the course of the exercises, a Christian address was given by the Rev. Mr. Smith. We cannot but regret that such an address was given, and that it was listened to with any degree of attention. The address, we believe, was given in the Church, and was listened to by the students of the Gymnasium, with the exception of a few who were not present. The address was given by the Rev. Mr. Smith, and was listened to by the students of the Gymnasium, with the exception of a few who were not present.

THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

Schools.

The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school. The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school.

THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

Public Instruction.

The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school. The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school.

THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

Public Instruction.

The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school. The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school.

THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

Public Instruction.

The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school. The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school.

THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

Public Instruction.

The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school. The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school.

THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

Public Instruction.

The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school. The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school.

THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

Public Instruction.

The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school. The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school.

THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

Public Instruction.

The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school. The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school.

THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

Public Instruction.

The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school. The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school.

THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

Public Instruction.

The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school. The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school.

THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

Public Instruction.

The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school. The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school.

THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

Public Instruction.

The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school. The laws of the State of Massachusetts provide for the support of public schools, and require that every town shall have at least one school, and that every child between the ages of five and twenty-one shall attend school.