From Charles’s Journal.

The ladies of both parties, in their dressing-suits, are seen joying greatly. And here and there, among the ladies, is a boisterous crowd of men, who are playing with each other, and laughing heartily.

There’s a noise in the town, and a great deal of excitement. The town is filled with people, and the streets are crowded. There are horse-drawn carriages, and sleighs, and carriages, and every kind of conveyance.
