THE LIBERATOR.

EXAMINATION WITH MR. BROWN.

A Mr. Brown, a gentleman of the most respectable character, appeared before the committee on the 19th inst., and testified that he was on the occasion of the attack on Harper's Ferry, and that he was acquainted with all the parties concerned in the affair. He stated that the plan was carried out in a most peaceful manner, and that there was no intention of violence. He further stated that Mr. Brown had been a prominent abolitionist for many years, and had a large number of friends in the South who were in favor of the same principles. He said that the plan was perfectly legitimate, and that it was only a matter of time before the South would be brought to reason.

THE JOHN BROWN PROOF.

In reply to the charge that Mr. Brown was a traitor, Mr. Brown said that he had never been a traitor, and that he had always been a true American. He said that he had been a faithful member of the Republican Party, and that he had always been in favor of the Union. He said that he had always been a peace-loving man, and that he had never been in favor of war. He said that he had always been a strong advocate of the Union, and that he had always been in favor of the preservation of the Union. He said that he had always been a true American, and that he had always been in favor of the Union.

Claire and the Slavery Convention.

The annual Anti-Slavery Convention was held in Boston on Saturday, November 25th, to take action on the current situation and advance the cause of abolition. The convention was attended by prominent abolitionists and advocates for the elimination of slavery. Speakers and delegates discussed strategies and plans to further the cause, emphasizing the need for continued efforts in the face of ongoing challenges. The event was a testament to the commitment of those involved in the struggle against slavery and their dedication to the principles of freedom and equality.
