SELECTIONS.

SOUTHERN SARDANITY.

This Philadelphia paper gives the following letters:

Mr. George Robinson, formerly a resident of New Orleans, writes of his return visit to that city, and of the impressions it made on his mind. He says:

"It is wonderful how much the city has changed since I left it. The streets are now much more crowded than they were when I was a boy. The negroes, too, are much more numerous. I never saw so many negroes in one place before. The streets are now much more crowded than they were when I was a boy. The negroes, too, are much more numerous. I never saw so many negroes in one place before."

ANOTHER RENAL OUTBREAK.

A correspondent in Washington, D.C., writes:

"This is the third time that I have seen a similar outbreak in the capital. It began with a small number of people, but has now spread to a large number. The disease is proceeding very rapidly."

A SOUTHERN LETTER TO OUR SISTERS.

Mrs. J. J. Smith writes to her sister in Washington:

"Dear Sister, I have been thinking of you a great deal lately. I hope you are well. I have been very busy lately, but have managed to find time to write to you."

DUTY BEARS THE SADIST.

There is scarcely anything which can serve so well as the present period to remind us of the duties we owe to our fellow-men. The war is now in full progress, and the need of our country is for men who will stand by her in the hour of danger. Let us not forget that we are fighting for the principles which are dear to us, and that we are acting in accordance with the will of the people."
