Refuge of Oppression.

LETTER FROM ALABAMA.

Macon, Alabama, June 20, 1861. (Extract from a Letter to a Friend.)

It is not only in the South that the freedom of the negro is threatened, but in the North also. The
Poetry

The Liberator.

R. H. Maywood-Wisconsin.

The Tithable.

The poetical tribute of the soil, to the father of its spirit; to the men who have given the world a sense of the value of human freedom. The poet sings of the glories of the past, and speaks of the triumphs of the present. The song is a hymn of praise to the great and good who have lived in the world, and who have left their mark upon it. The poet's words are full of the spirit of liberty, and he speaks of the rights of man, and of the duties of the citizen. The song is a call to action, and a challenge to the world to rise up and fight for freedom. The poet's words are full of hope, and he speaks of the future of the world, and of the triumph of liberty. The song is a hymn of praise to the great and good who have lived in the world, and who have left their mark upon it. The poet's words are full of the spirit of liberty, and he speaks of the rights of man, and of the duties of the citizen. The song is a call to action, and a challenge to the world to rise up and fight for freedom. The poet's words are full of hope, and he speaks of the future of the world, and of the triumph of liberty.

---

LETTER FROM MAIN.

R. H. Maywood-Wisconsin.

The song of the soul, to the father of its spirit; to the man who has given the world a sense of the value of human freedom. The poet sings of the glories of the past, and speaks of the triumphs of the present. The song is a hymn of praise to the great and good who have lived in the world, and who have left their mark upon it. The poet's words are full of the spirit of liberty, and he speaks of the rights of man, and of the duties of the citizen. The song is a call to action, and a challenge to the world to rise up and fight for freedom. The poet's words are full of hope, and he speaks of the future of the world, and of the triumph of liberty. The song is a hymn of praise to the great and good who have lived in the world, and who have left their mark upon it. The poet's words are full of the spirit of liberty, and he speaks of the rights of man, and of the duties of the citizen. The song is a call to action, and a challenge to the world to rise up and fight for freedom. The poet's words are full of hope, and he speaks of the future of the world, and of the triumph of liberty.

---

SMILE, AND BE CONTENTFUL.

R. H. Maywood-Wisconsin.

The song of the soul, to the father of its spirit; to the man who has given the world a sense of the value of human freedom. The poet sings of the glories of the past, and speaks of the triumphs of the present. The song is a hymn of praise to the great and good who have lived in the world, and who have left their mark upon it. The poet's words are full of the spirit of liberty, and he speaks of the rights of man, and of the duties of the citizen. The song is a call to action, and a challenge to the world to rise up and fight for freedom. The poet's words are full of hope, and he speaks of the future of the world, and of the triumph of liberty. The song is a hymn of praise to the great and good who have lived in the world, and who have left their mark upon it. The poet's words are full of the spirit of liberty, and he speaks of the rights of man, and of the duties of the citizen. The song is a call to action, and a challenge to the world to rise up and fight for freedom. The poet's words are full of hope, and he speaks of the future of the world, and of the triumph of liberty.