LETTER TO GENERAL FRANKFORT.

Major General Frankfort.

BRONX, Jan. 23.-The legislature of New York is about to begin its session, and the country is excited by the: prospect of its proceedings. The question of the emancipation of the slaves is to be the first topic of discussion. I am therefore anxious to make known to my constituents the views of the people of the United States on this subject.

The emancipation of the slaves is a subject of the utmost importance to the welfare of the country. It is a question which affects the moral and political condition of the nation, and which cannot be ignored without danger to its future prosperity. The emancipation of the slaves will not only restore to them their natural rights, but will also remove the moral and political evils which have been produced by their continued bondage. It will not only be a benefit to the slaves themselves, but it will also be a benefit to the country at large.

I therefore feel it my duty to express my opinions on this subject, and to urge upon my constituents the necessity of taking prompt and decided action in favor of the emancipation of the slaves. I trust that the legislature will not fail to do its duty, and that the people of the United States will give their support to any man who shall endeavor to effect this great reform.
LETTER

The Liberator.

THE FAMILY.

My dear Mr. Garrison,

You ask me how I am getting along, and if I am prepared to come to this country. I am, I assure you, prepared to come to this country, but I had better stay here for the present. My health is none too good, and I must have some time to get it back before I can leave.

I am, however, very much interested in the present condition of affairs, and I hope to be able to do something towards bringing about a peaceful settlement. I am trying to get in touch with some of the leading men in the North, and I hope to be able to make some progress in my efforts.

I have been reading a great deal about the war, and I think it is certain to bring about a revolution in the country. The North is getting tired of the war, and the people are beginning to feel that it is time to put an end to it.

I am, my dear Mr. Garrison, yours truly,

[Signature]

THE GREAT MANUFACTURING FAIR OF THE EAST.

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 25. 1861.

My dear Mr. Garrison,

You ask me how I am getting along, and if I am prepared to come to this country. I am, I assure you, prepared to come to this country, but I had better stay here for the present. My health is none too good, and I must have some time to get it back before I can leave.

I am, however, very much interested in the present condition of affairs, and I hope to be able to do something towards bringing about a peaceful settlement. I am trying to get in touch with some of the leading men in the North, and I hope to be able to make some progress in my efforts.

I have been reading a great deal about the war, and I think it is certain to bring about a revolution in the country. The North is getting tired of the war, and the people are beginning to feel that it is time to put an end to it.

I am, my dear Mr. Garrison, yours truly,

[Signature]