MR. LINCOLN'S ADDRESS AT NEW YORK.

The Abolitionists and Their Relations to the War.

[Republicans readied by Samuel F. Douglas.]

The President of the United States has addressed the people through the press, and his words have been read and heard throughout the land. The address was one of the most remarkable ever delivered by a President of the United States. It was a call to the people, a call to action, a call to duty, and a call to victory.

The President began by saying that the war was not a war of abolition, but a war for the preservation of the Union. He declared that the war was a war for the Union, and that the Union was the foundation of all our institutions.

The President went on to say that the Abolitionists were not enemies of the Union, but friends of the Union. He declared that the Abolitionists were not enemies of the Union, but friends of the Union, and that they were not enemies of the Union, but friends of the Union.

The President also said that the Abolitionists were not enemies of the Union, but friends of the Union, and that they were not enemies of the Union, but friends of the Union.

The President concluded his address by saying that the war was a war for the Union, and that the Union was the foundation of all our institutions.

LIFE AND LETTERS OF JOHN BROWN.

Washington, D.C.

January 11, 1862.

John Brown's Life and Letters: (a) By Himself.

The emancipation of the Negroes has been one of the most epoch-making movements of the century. It has resulted in the establishment of a new nation, and in the abolition of slavery in the United States. The struggle for freedom has been long and arduous, but it has finally been successful. The abolition of slavery has been a great benefit to the nation, and it has been a source of pride to the people. The emancipation of the Negroes has been a great victory for liberty, and it has been a great triumph for the cause of humanity. The struggle for freedom has been a great lesson to the world, and it has taught us the importance of the right of man to be free. The emancipation of the Negroes has been a great triumph for the cause of humanity, and it has been a great lesson to the world. The emancipation of the Negroes has been a great benefit to the nation, and it has been a source of pride to the people.
