Refuge of Oppression.

The Boston Evening Transcript, Oct. 31.

The British Parliament, after several days of debate, has declared that slavery in the British colonies is against the principles of justice and humanity. The decision was reached by a vote of 251 to 117, with 22 abstentions. It is believed that this action will have a profound effect on the course of events in the United States, where slavery remains legal in some states.
